

Subject: Consumer Product Safety Improvement Act

Dear Valued Customer,

We know many of you have been hearing about recent consumer protection laws that have been passed by Congress to make sure the toys sold across the United States are safe for our children.

Effective February 10, 2009, this law – the Consumer Product Safety Improvement Act – creates a new standard to eliminate lead and certain toxic chemicals in many children’s products and children’s toys.

We always have been and will continue to be committed to buying & selling product that meets the standards supplied to us by the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC). As has always been our policy, our store will not buy or sell products that have been recalled by the CPSC.

We are thrilled that we will be continuing to provide you with an outlet to buy quality, safe, gently used children’s merchandise. We are also committed to providing to you an opportunity to get cash for children’s items you no longer need, and the ability to trade for items you do need. At Once Upon A Child®, we pride ourselves on providing only the best quality of gently used and new goods for our customers.

For more information on this new legislation, please visit the Consumer Product Safety Commission’s website at www.cpsc.gov.

Respectfully yours,

Susan Baustian
